MEETING FOR MOTHERS AND PARENT TEACHERS AT MADISON NEXT WEEK

Madison, Wis., April 17.—The annual convention of the Wisconsin congress of mothers' and parent teacher associations will be held here April 27 and 28 in the assembly chamber. The address of welcome will be delivered by State Superintendent C. P. Cary and will be followed by a talk on women's clubs and parent teacher work by Mrs. H. S. Richards, president of the Madison Woman's club. Thursday night Dr. C. A. Harper will give an address on birth registration and infant mortality. Mrs. D. R. Mendenhall will follow with a talk on the prenatal influence in Wisconsin. Among others who will appear on the program are: J. L. Gillin, Mrs. D. O. Reed, A. Wexley of the extension department, and Miss Mary O'Keefe, assistant superintendent of the Madison schools.

OVER ONE THOUSAND AT SUNDAY MEETING

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH FILLED TO CAPACITY LAST EVENING TO HEAR REV. BRIGHAM.

RELIGIOUS AWAKENING

Messages of Lenten Services Are Striking Responsive Chord—To Continue Through Holy Week.

Over eleven hundred persons crowded into the Congregational church Sunday evening to hear Rev. Brigham preach one of his forceful sermons at the Lenten services. Some went away with a new conviction, some stood up and others sat on the steps of the balcony. The committee in charge consider it indicative of the crowds that will attend each night this week.

The after meeting was equally as large and was touching as it was profitable. A new religious awakening seems to have taken hold on Janesville which is bound to reach the climax before the close of the meetings.

An impressive chorus choir rendered various special numbers and Mr. Van Pool sang a very effective solo. In the absence of an organist Mrs. Brigham kindly consented to preside at the organ.

The afternoon rehearsal of the children's chorus for next Sunday fully one hundred and fifty children were present. These and others are expected to meet at the same place, the Sunday school room of the Congregational church, on Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock.

Special numbers by the chorus will be given tonight and another strong sermon will be delivered by Rev. Brigham. It is suggested that the public come early if they desire their selection of seats.

"Question. 'Now if thou canst make known the writing?' Daniel 5:16. Answer. And this is the answer: 'Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting'." Among the many dramatic situations pictured in the Bible there is none more dramatic than the story of the fall of Belshazzar.

Belshazzar had made a great feast and invited a thousand of his lords and princes to a banquet feast in oriental splendor. Wine flowed and the king, as the revelry goes on, commands that the gold and silver vessels which had been taken in a former conquest from Solomon's temple in Jerusalem should be brought forth. In the midst of their revelry every hand is staid and every eye is riveted. A hand has appeared and is writing on the wall. A ghastly band. How it came matters not. The revelers around the banquet table were hushed. The mother of the king comes in and tells them that there is a man in whom is the spirit of the holy gods, who in the days of the king's grandfather had been at the head of all the soothsayers and seers. Daniel is sent for and the king of a man Daniel is we know; no longer a young man.

He assures the king that he cares nothing for gifts or his rewards, but that he will read the writing and make known the interpretation; but first of all he recalls a bit of history and tells the king plainly how God had dealt with his predecessors and with his kingdom in other days. The king forgotten it, and that he has committed sacrilege in the use of the sacred vessels and the God in whose hand that breath is, and whose are all the ways, and whose is the kingdom. He then reads the writing: "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin." This is the interpretation of the thing: "Mene, God has numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. Tekel, Thou art weighed in the balances, and found wanting. Peres, Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." The king, the revelers, had said that night we do not know, but this we do know, that before it was over there was a clamor outside the gates. The port of the banquet hall were broken in, the army of Cyrus had turned the waters of the river Euphrates and had entered the city by its channel, and that night the days of the kingdom numbered and brought to an end.

"Canst thou read the writing? We read it and it is eternally the same. 'Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting.'"

"First of all, in whose balances was the king weighed? In the same balances in which every man and woman who walks the earth is weighed. 'If you will turn with me to the two numbers of the book of Enoch, you will find the first one is, in these balances and the first one is, 'Thou shalt have no other Gods before me.' The people who lived around the altar of Baal were bowing down to idols of wood and to silver and gold, and men are doing it yet."

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; is another of these weighty laws which God is weighing you. A multitude of men think of profanity as deaths roll from their lips as easily as water runs down hill. The man who will swear is ready for any sin and crime against God for the foundation of modern lies in reverence for God and His will, and the man who takes God's name in vain shows by that fact that he has no reverence for the God of all morality and of all light; that he despises the very foundation of righteousness. What do you think of the man who has lost respect for his mother who will use her name lightly? What do you think of a man who will stand by and hear his mother belittled, derided, and reviled, and make no defense? I think you would agree with me that he was about as mean and as low down a scoundrel as could be found, and yet if a man is low down for he reviles his mother, what about the man that reviles God; who certainly is greater than a mother, and more surely deserves our love and respect?"

"Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work. Not the seventh day of the week but the seventh day after six days of work is the command. Here is another of these weighty laws which God is weighing you. I wonder how many keep the Sabbath? Keeping the Sabbath does not mean giving it over to golf, I say to you in the light of history, when a nation loses from its life the reverence for God's one day in seven, when it ceases to take time to turn its mind toward God and toward higher things, it has started on the toboggan slide to oblivion; and when it reaches the bottom, it can find rest and nourishment for a while, but on the golf links, or the ball park, or whirling across the country in its automobile, he is making a fatal mistake, and will pay the price by the death of all that is best and finest in his soul. How much do you weigh in this balance? We are losing respect for authority and law in this nation. More people are killed in Chicago every month than in London with three times the population a year. There are more murders in Chicago than in Italy. Command is at the basis of all respect for law and authority. When a boy ceases to honor his father and mother he is on the road to the life of a criminal. 'Thou shalt not kill. I just want to say here that there are more ways than one of committing murder. It is not necessary for a man to drive a dagger into the heart of his wife or put a bullet through her brain to murder her. There are women in Janesville whose husbands would have done an act of mercy had they done this, for instead they have made them live in a living hell. They promised to love and cherish them; they abused and neglected them. They promised to cleave to them only and instead they have broken their hearts with their intrigues and their indifference. When a man ceases to honor God he is a murderer. How much do we weigh in this balance of the almighty?"

"Thou shalt not commit adultery. I may only speak a word of this but there are scores in this city who sink condemned in the presence of this command before a just God who are living in adultery. Will that sin weigh in the balance of the almighty? They live, a stench to the nostrils of a decent city, and fit only to be outcasts from society; and yet some of them walk unashamed and unabashed among decent men and women. God has stamped this sin with the most loathsome physical punishment of any sin on earth. But do not forget as you ponder your innocence that Jesus himself said that sin might be in thought as truly as in deed. 'Thou shalt not steal. This is another weight in the balance. And stealing is taking that which does not belong to you. It matters not how you take it; by reaching into another man's pocket or by a trick of trade, or by a dishonest bargain, or whether you take it over the gambling table. If you have taken that which does not belong to you, you are a thief in the sight of God."

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. Oh, you say, I have never lied. Oh, you say, I have never taken an oath in court. But I wonder if you have never repeated that contemptible lie which you have heard and gossiped around about your neighbor? You have taken it 2nd or 18th hand and passed it on for gospel truth, confidentially, of course, but its damning work is done beyond recall. Worse than lying is this sin, for the man who steals takes only money, but the one who gossips and tattles and runs around telling man stories about his neighbor robs a man of his reputation and his standing."

"Thou shalt not covet. You would not rob, you would not steal, but you would look what your neighbor has. In the light of these weighty laws, is there a man or woman in this house that has not been found wanting? Is there a preacher in this house that has not been found wanting? But this is only the least. Let us look at the 10th command. I find a still greater commandment than this. Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy mind, with all thy strength, with all thy power, and with all thy might. This is the first and greatest commandment. If you have not yielded your life in loving obedience to the Heavenly Father, you have committed the greatest sin of all. You have turned your back upon infinite love. You are weighed in the balance and found wanting. But I want to say that the message of the gospel is this, that Jesus Christ the sinless one has taken upon himself our sins. He will blot out all our transgressions and remove our iniquities as far as the east is from the west. It is the promise of God's word and cannot fail. Will you accept the promise?"

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Janesville, April 16, 1916.

Editor Gazette: Please give this space in your paper. I am a working woman and feel that I can speak for many women as well as myself. I am a factory worker and am very anxious that the Gazette, a factory located in Janesville. We know it will help the women who are obliged to leave their home each morning in order to earn their bread. It will help the person who has no money to rent; the women who are trying to make a living renting a few rooms to help support a family; the merchant who has groceries, meats, shoes, hats, or anything to sell will mean several hundred people in Janesville, new homes built, work for painter, paper-hanger, carpenter and mason. A better way for the farmer which will help his wife more than a rest room, with all respect to the good women who are thinking of their farmer sisters. But the farmers' wives are almost sure of their living while many of our working people in town cannot rest nights, worrying about where the work will come to earn money to feed and clothe our little ones.

"Now then, if there is any doubt about locating that factory, why not make a house to house canvass and try and secure the remainder of the money and let every working woman in the city help all they can. I believe almost every person in the city will be willing to give a small sum if they are asked to do so personally. Many are too busy who would be glad to help if some person came to their home and got the money and they would not have the trouble of going down town. Let the women who wish to do good take it in hand, each one take neighborhood and the work could be done in a short time. Let us also ask the farmers to help. What ever happens let us wake up and not let this chance of new life and industry lose out for lack of interest of ready for any sin and crime against world good and let us working people try to help ourselves also."

An Anxious Working Woman.

TWO OFFICE BUILDINGS
TO BE BUILT AT MADISON

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Madison, Wis., April 17.—Two new office buildings are to be erected here by "Piper Brothers." They have purchased the old Madison hotel, erected before the Civil war, and owned by the late millionaire, P. A. Ogden and will erect a modern office building on the site. Recently the Pipers bought the old Fair store block, the deed to which was once owned by Daniel Webster. It will also be razed and a modern business block will take its place. Both buildings are on the capitol square.

"When I fill my pipe with rich, sweet, mellow NIGGER HAIR I know I'm smokin' real tobacco. I don't find any loose, hard stems in this good Long Cut—nothing but long, curly strands of sweet, clean tobacco.

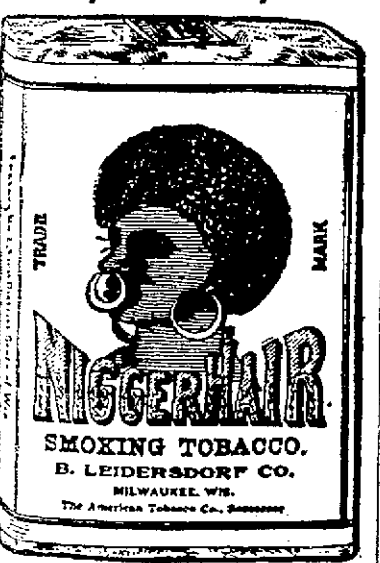

"I keep going all day long with NIGGER HAIR—pipeful after pipeful of it—an I get more good smokes out of every package of NIGGER HAIR than I ever got out of any other tobacco."

NIGGER HAIR

Long Cut Tobacco

NIGGER HAIR has been the favorite tobacco of experienced smokers for generations. Careful ageing and blending of mild Burley leaf gives NIGGER HAIR pleasing richness, sweetness and mellowness—cutting it into long, curly shreds makes it slow-burning and cool smoking. The brand owes its name to that distinctive cut.

NIGGER HAIR never varies in Quality—it's the same good smoke year in and year out.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER 46.
Animals fed on an abundance of food from which the mineral salts are removed die sooner than if they receive no food at all—ignoring this significant fact, man continues to remove the mineral elements from the food upon which the future stamina, endurance, strength, health, energy, and efficiency of America depend.

Man can starve to death on an abundance of food. A diet of pure protein, pure fat, pure starch, and pure sugar, from which the mineral matter has been removed by refining processes, will produce disease and death.

The calorie value of such food, as estimated by the modern scientist, occupies the highest place in the table of caloric value. It is accepted in the hospitals of the United States.

Such foods, nevertheless, will bring about the death of the animal feeding upon them in shorter time than would be the case if no food were fed at all. The worst of the situation usually conveys a picture of an unfortunate creature dying of neglect in an abandoned garret or of a shipwrecked sailor slowly perishing on an uninhabited and desolate island. The word is never associated with an abundance of food. Yet the common disorder of American life is mineral starvation associated with what is apparently an oversupply of good things to eat.

Herman Hille, who has contributed to the literature of mineral metabolism its most valuable data concerning the relation of mineral salts and colloids to medicine, declares: "From a purely physical standpoint mineral starvation is usually the primary cause of disease. Organic minerals are more easily utilized than inorganic forms. Loss of mineral bodies impairs the food value of foodstuffs, and, moreover, tends to make them poisonous."

Mineral starvation, regardless of its cause, is followed by disturbances in the caloric value of the food ingested, vital processes and activities of the human organism, a reduced supply of vital energy, pollution of the blood, juices and tissues, and the preparation of tissues in which parasites thrive and multiply without hindrance. Applying these facts and conclusions, we find that the food minerals can no longer be ignored by rational therapeutics. A rational scientific estimation of the value of foodstuffs must include the mineral bodies.

One of the most important duties of chemistry is a rational differentiation between inorganic and organic forms of matter.

These statements of Hille were made in Chicago, Nov. 7, 1913 at the fifth annual meeting of the American Association of Clinical Research, in which body it is my privilege to enjoy membership.

Nearly three years have past since that memorable meeting, yet, so slow moving is truth, and so little has the institute or hospital in America has to this day attempted, even in a feeble manner, to apply its life-saving principles or to give to them, by any sign of recognition, however belated, the dignity to which they are entitled.

Strangely enough, scientists are all agreed concerning well-established facts of nutrition. It has been proved, for instance, that in the digestion of protein, (meat, cheese, beans, etc.) free sulphuric and free phosphoric acids are elaborated from the sulphur and lecithin compounds of such foods.

It is also well known that these acids, unless neutralized by the base-forming elements of the food ingested, act as tissue destroyers through their abstraction of the alkaline salts of the tissue such as calcium, magnesium, and potassium, with which they unite to form the neutral sulphates and phosphates excreted in the urine.

In the presence of these well-established facts, we have arrived at that point where it is no longer difficult to perceive the disastrous consequences which, in certain cases, such as the nursing of infants, the growth and the development of the young, follow the removal of the mineral salts from refined foodstuffs, and draw from them a lesson.

QUESTIONS ABOUT FOOD

Answered by Alfred W. McCann.

Q.—I am very fond of salt and use it in abundance in my food. Has table salt a good or bad effect on one? Some say it is bad. Some say it is good. Can it hurt the eyesight?

A. I also like sour lemon juice and all sorts of sweets. What is the effect of all this on the body? I am suffering from unusually large and painful pimples, which completely cover my skin. A physician said that this condition cannot be cured by medicine, and that it is natural to my age, eighteen years.

Do you think salt or sour or sweets have any part in producing this condition?

A. You are very foolish to persist in the excessive use of salt and sugar. Salt undoubtedly has its place in the diet when moderately used. Animals left to themselves, such as the deer, the goat, and the wild turkey, lick salt licks. Domesticated animals such as the horse or cow are sometimes given salt with their food. Left to themselves they will go days without it, and then by instinct partake of what they want.

Salt foods do produce conditions that are not desirable. Persistent use of salt in large quantities leads to serious evils. The American people as a rule consume ten times the quantity of sugar that is good for them. You can be quite sure that our fondness for salt and sugar is in some manner related to the skin condition you describe.

The skin condition, however, is but a symptom of much deeper trouble. By all means curb your appetite for both salt and sugar. A little salt and a little sugar will not hurt you, nor will they affect your eyesight. The lemon juice will not hurt you under any circumstances. In the United States we do not consume as many lemons or oranges as we should.

Orfordville News

Orfordville, April 15.—S. E. Anderson transacted business in Broadhead Saturday.

County Superintendent of Schools Antidel was out from Janesville on Saturday on business pertaining to the school.

Mr. Sam Onsgard, who has been confined to the house for the past week with a severe case of quinsy, is somewhat better.

Mrs. L. E. Myhre, who has been to Mercy Hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis, has sufficiently recovered to return home. She arrived on Saturday morning.

James Mowad had the misfortune to injure one of his knees while doing cement work at the Lee cheese factory and has been confined to the house for the past several days.

lished facts the scientist with singular blindness fails to ask this question: "Of what avail is the caloric value of foodstuffs which have been so defined that they no longer contain the base-forming elements necessary to prevent tissue-destruction and the accompanying acidosis which inevitably follows a disturbed equilibrium between the base-forming, and acid-forming elements of food?"

With a hundred other investigators Gaudier has demonstrated that sodium, phosphorus, potassium, lime, calcium, magnesium, iron, chlorine, iodine, etc., are found in a constant manner in the residue left by the combustion of the animal organs, glands and internal secretions.

"These elements," he declares, "are absolutely indispensable to the life of the tissues. The system is constantly excreting them and, therefore, impoverishing itself by its excretions. It is, therefore, imperative that they should be found in sufficient quantity and in assimilable forms in the different foods of man."

The French people, who are also suffering from the effects of food refinement, have not lacked warning to make them heed the folly of removing from their diet such physiologically active elements, the reactions and interactions of which control the biochemical processes of life.

The subject of mineral starvation due to food refinement, is no new theme. Foster, in his experiments, established the fact that mice, pigeons, and dogs fed with diets which had been drained of its bases by the action of hot water, even if cereals or starch, sugar, and fat, or even a mixture of these, were fed, do not live beyond twenty to thirty days. Give them all the calories they require, but deprive them of the mineral matters natural to food, and these animals behave as though absolutely starved.

It should not be necessary to emphasize again the fact that the salts of sodium, phosphorus, sulphur, calcium, magnesium, potassium, iron, etc., are necessary to the carrying on of life's processes, and that in such processes they are being constantly removed from the body.

Gouraud has proved that these salts are excreted daily in health to the following extent:

Sodium chloride, 11 to 12 grams; phosphates, 4 to 5 grams; sulphates, 3 to 4 grams; calcium carbonates, 5 gram; magnesium, 2 centigram; potassium, 4 centigram; iron, .02 centigram.

Through the normal excretion of these mineral elements in health it becomes evident that a constant supply of them is necessary.

It is not wonderful, therefore, that animals fed on foods from which these elements have been removed should perish.

Starling, corroborating the work of Foster, declares "Animals fed upon demineralized or refined food rapidly show distaste for such food, become ill and die sooner than if they receive no food at all."

"It is therefore evident," he continues, "that the mineral constituents of food, although yielding no energy in themselves, are as necessary to the maintenance of life as the yielding or calorie-yielding foodstuffs. Foster, commenting upon these obvious conclusions, adds the following significant report: 'The constant loss of other substances present perhaps in negligible quantity, yet of great importance, must also be reckoned with.'"

We have almost arrived at that point where it is no longer difficult to perceive the disastrous consequences which, in certain cases, such as the nursing of infants, the growth and the development of the young, follow the removal of the mineral salts from refined foodstuffs, and draw from them a lesson.

Q.—I should like to ask you whether Quaker Oats (I do not mean Quaker Oatmeal) is the best of the oases left in. How about Raisin-Breakfast Food? We use brown rice and whole wheat bread altogether and a pound of any butter in the house except for cooking. I do want to be sure I have the right cereals for our growing children.

A. Rolled oats of any kind are less nutritious than any other commercial form of breakfast food. They contain nearly all of the oat, old-fashioned oatmeal alone being superior in this respect.

The only thing removed from rolled oats or oatmeal is the outer chaffy husk. In eliminating this husk a portion of the skin of the kernel is lost.

The germ, or at least its greater part, together with most of the outer layers of the grain, are saved. The average oatmeal now on the market contains 2 per cent of mineral matter, which is just about three times as much as the average denatured breakfast food, such as farina, contains. Various artistically labeled farina products contain.

"These wheat breakfast foods contain much less than 2 per cent of fat. Rolled oats and oatmeal contain at least 7 per cent of fat, natural to the grain. Oatmeal is rich in calcium, phosphorus and iron. As a breakfast cereal, therefore, nothing better. Sulphur bleached, or frequent, appear on the market, but I do not think any package of rolled oats now bearing a reputable name contains any sulphur bleached oats. Should I ever find such oats I shall be glad to say so here.

I regret that I am unable to give you the information you ask in regard to Raisin-Breakfast Food. I have never put it through the laboratory and the Raisin-Breakfast have never taken me into their confidence. This question I may be able to answer later.

After consulting with the state board of health it was decided that after taking the necessary precautions, Principal Peterson, who was to be quarantined with his family, two members of which were suffering from scarlet fever, be allowed to continue his duties and for the next week or ten days will be "quarantined out." The school house will be thoroughly fumigated and it is expected that there will be no further trouble.

Investment heating!

"Well bought is half sold" runs the old maxim. Of course every man buys with uppermost thought of a permanent home, but the prudent man buys his home also with an eye to its being a "good investment, if he or his heirs should want to sell." The lot is bought and the house built in the belief that the property will increase in value. Why therefore should anyone nowadays discount or depreciate his property by failing to modernize it at once with a permanent, comfort-producing outfit of

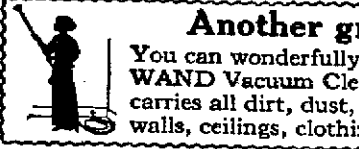

"I want this foundation of home comfort! It will prove an investment to me—not an expense!"

START CONSTRUCTION WORK ON FLOOD PREVENTION DAMS.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Dayton, O., April 17.—Construction work was under way today on the great engineering project for flood prevention in the Miami valley to prevent the repetition of the disastrous floods of 1913 which caused millions of dollars of damage and claimed several hundred lives.

Five mammoth basins, large enough to hold back the crest of a flood forty per cent greater than the devastating flood of three years ago, are being erected. The cost of materials will be about $24,000,000.

There will be five large dams at crucial points. The highest, at Englewood, will rise 120 feet above the surrounding country; the lowest will be 55 feet high, and all 25 feet across at the top.

Towns between Piqua and Hamilton, a distance of 100 miles, will be protected when the project is completed.

The plan of the flood prevention system is to let the rivers carry off water at their maximum capacity without doing damage. The retention basins are to take up excess water and then serve as feeders, allowing the run of a heavy rain to be distributed over several weeks instead of several days. The latter uncontrolled action is what caused so much damage in 1913.

It is expected that the work will be completed in three years. Enough steel will be used to build a 175-story skyscraper, enough concrete to build a column ten feet square and thirteen miles high, excavation enough for more than 3,000 miles of trenches, and enough embankment to fill a trail of cars reaching from New York to San Francisco.

It is quite safe to turn the hands of a nonstriking watch or clock backward.

THE HUNDRED AND TEN.
The coming convention of a hundred republicans chosen from the eleven congressional districts who will meet in Madison on April 26th, to place in nomination a candidate for the United States senate to oppose Robert M. La Follette for the nomination, have their work all picked out for them. They all realize by this time that it is not going to be a picnic to bring about the defeat of the senior United States senator at the September primaries and that to accomplish this desired end they must place in nomination the best possible material available to bear the brunt of the fight.

It is not a time for sentiment, but for action. The man to be named must be a fighting man from the ground up. He must be a man the voters have confidence in that he will not let up in warfare upon the voters demanding that they send to Washington a representative in the upper house of congress who will work for their interests, vote for their interests and represent their interests. That he will devote his time to the business of the nation and not to personal affairs. It is going to be a long, hard campaign of education, but it must be done if anything is to be accomplished.

This committee of a hundred and ten will decide who this man is to be. Thus far Rock county has two men prominently mentioned for the office. John M. Whitehead and M. G. Jeffris are the two talked of in this connection. Both have many friends throughout the state that would like to see them honored. Mr. Whitehead is an avowed candidate, having made a formal declaration that he was in the field for the endorsement, while Mr. Jeffris has stated he would accept the endorsement of the convention if he see fit to select him as the standard-bearer.

No matter whether it be Jeffris or Whitehead, or some other man, the work cut out for him is one that will mean a most strenuous summer's campaign and present indications are that it will be the most bitter of any of the decade or so past. This convention of a hundred and ten will decide the standard-bearer and then it is the duty of every republican to get behind the candidate and help the work along.

DELAYS DANGEROUS.
Delay in properly equipping the United States army with the necessary means to transport food and munitions to the fighting front have proven a serious handicap to the punitive force of regulars who have been in Mexico some days ago in pursuit of Villa. In fact, in almost every line of equipment our much-boasted-of army was found deficient and although they make up for these defects in gallant and brave service, daring horsemanship and intrepid conduct, still it proved the old adage that delays are dangerous. Just now congress is quibbling over a defense bill that would in time help remedy many of the existing evils although it would not entirely eradicate them. One would think with the lesson taught by the Spanish-American war fresh in their minds they would realize that it is an impossibility to arm, drill and equip a fighting force within a few months that will accomplish anything more than did the majority of the soldiers called out in '98. It was not the men's fault, but the systems. The everlasting delay and procrastination of those in power who fail to appreciate that an armed force of men must be equipped with something better than courage to win any battles. The sooner the nation realizes the possibility of trouble with some power that really means trouble might be averted if this country was known to be prepared the quicker the remedy will be found. Half the battle is being prepared. We study and drill our minds to equip ourselves for a life's work and yet the pacifist would have us believe we do not need to make any preparation for war, for war will never come to us, and if it does we can meet conditions quickly enough by the patriotic response of the citizens of this glorious nation. With all respect to these citizens who respond gladly they will not be half so quick to offer their services if they know they are not to be properly equipped for any emergency that might arise, and the time to prepare for any contingency is now and not when it is too late.

BOOM THE FOURTH.
While it is yet but the middle of April the question of the coming Fourth of July celebration is a subject for much discussion. Every two years Janesville invited the surrounding countryside to come to the city and be entertained and they accept with avidity. Each year the brunt of the work falls on the shoulders of a few men who either volunteer their services or are drafted into service. Each celebration is bigger and better than the previous one and the result is that Janesville is known the country over as one of the cities that hold a safe and safe celebration that is both entertaining, instructive, amusing and wholesome. In fact, Janesville began its sane celebrations long before the crusade for such became necessary. One remarkable feature is that the crowds, and they increase every year in size, are for the most part orderly and the fun enjoyed is of a wholesome nature. The committee having charge of this year's celebration will have hard work to surpass former efforts, but they promise some new and unique features that will surprise everyone and keep in accord the day that is to be celebrated, the hundred and fortieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

HOLY WEEK.
This week the civilized world observes the church celebration of Holy Week which will end on Sunday next with Easter. For the first time in many decades the Greek, Roman and Protestant churches are all commemorating the last chapters of the life of our Savior on earth. His death on the cross, and His glorious resurrection. It is a time for solemn prayer and thought. The churches throughout the world are holding special services and the solemnity of the event should not be forgotten nor its moral effect upon the world at large.

Now that the spring flowers are showing signs of life it is to be hoped that the enthusiasts who search the hill and dale and the wooded nooks for the gifts of nature will take care and pull them up by the roots unless they mean to transplant them in some other garden. Thousands upon thousands of wild blossoms are killed each year by thoughtless persons who do not look to the future and pleasure of others.

Birds and bird houses are quite the fad in Rock county. The teaching of the love for the feathered songsters, the habits, the foods and the benefits they shower upon mankind in the public schools has done away with the ruthless slaughter and robbing of nests of generation or so ago and in consequence we find the same birds visiting their old haunts year after year much to the delight of everyone.

Governor Philipp is still governor of Wisconsin despite the fact there has been a primary and the Milwaukee socialists elected La Follette delegates to spite their enemies, the "non-partisan" faction, who sought to elect an impossible candidate for mayor.

It would look as though a volunteer army might yet be needed, if only to guard the Rio Grande border line while the regulars went in and did the needed fighting. Watchful waiting sometimes pays, but in the case of Mexico it has proven a false hope.

It seems pretty tough, when a patriot is anxious to offer himself in loyal service to his country, that he can't get either an office or the chance to go as delegate to a presidential convention.

As everyone continues in the game old way, elbowing, jostling, grabbing, and tramping for the "big fish" but, the stock brokers issue glowing and optimistic statements that all is well.

The fact that no party ever glorified its big river and harbor bills in the platform or on the stump, does not prove that they won't help the congressmen to get elected again.

It will soon be time to enjoy the beauties of nature up Rock river. It is to be hoped that this year launch owners will comply with the law relative to lights and so forth.

Secretary Baker of the war department is getting quite well known now, but he need never expect to rival in fame his distinguished kinsman, Home Run Baker.

Anyone who says a watched pot never boils over is mistaken. Have we not been watching Mexico for months and has not the pot boiled over at last?

After protesting his indifference to politics, it is quite possible that Justice Hughes reads the morning paper before dipping into those dust-covered law books.

After complaining because the ball team gets rattled so easily, some men will go to the grounds and holler, "Rotten, take him out," at the home players.

The fact that a man is acquiring more skill in learning to run an automobile does not prove that he is getting any less dangerous to the public.

The fact that a man buys the usual quantity of gasoline at the high price does not prove that he can keep up his regular contribution to charities.

Who says public officials don't neglect their duties, when so many of them stick to their desks the day the ball team opens the season?

The political war for choice of convention delegates has now reached the stage of gas attacks in the newspapers.

Villa is working hard to convince this country that he is dead.

The hall was filled to its capacity, nearly three hundred being present.

In acting for a movie show you get much profit. You get much profit. And then in spare time you can go to see yourself.

Under the blazing sun of an oriental July day the workmen were building the now famous tower of Babel. (See "The Tower of Babel," "Conditions Under Which.") Leopold Boroo, the eminent master builder, hurrying thither, and was mopping his forehead with a large plantation leaf (see Alec Mainspring's "Biblical Substitutes for Handkerchiefs") came upon two workmen seated on a pile of masonry matching shakels.

"What's this?" yelled Boroo. "Don't you know we're three days behind in the work as it is? You're fired, both of you! Here, take your pay and go!"

And he gave them each a week's wages and kicked them off the masonry and the premises. Then he hunted up Maxim Gork, the foreman, to give him a piece of his mind. "But," said Gork, "these men were only looking for a job."

"Gurk!" cried Boroo (see Lillian Tish's "Explosives of the Ancients") and kicked himself violently in the shin.

INCREASE IN THE PRICE OF PAPER IN CHINESE STATES.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Peking, April 17.—Because of the increase in the price of paper, the Central Government, through the ministry of agriculture and commerce, has instructed the paper mill at Hankow to increase its output. Small newspapers throughout China are being closed down because of the high price of paper, and even dailies in the larger cities have been compelled to cease publication.

MOMENTOES OF FALLEN MEN PACKED AWAY IN OFFICES.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
London, April 17.—Packed away in the pigeon holes of the record office of the Territorial regiments in London buildings are thousands of little brown parcels and canvas bags which have a pathetic interest for the relatives of soldiers who have died in action. There are letters, too, many hundreds of them—the last line, perhaps, to parents, relatives or friends—written just before the battle. Grim relics of the fight, the canvas bags contain all that the soldier left in the way of effects. A wrist watch, a shaving brush, a pipe or a photograph—these are but a few of the mementoes.

Under the blazing sun of an oriental July day the workmen were building the now famous tower of Babel. (See "The Tower of Babel," "Conditions Under Which.") Leopold Boroo, the eminent master builder, hurrying thither, and was mopping his forehead with a large plantation leaf (see Alec Mainspring's "Biblical Substitutes for Handkerchiefs") came upon two workmen seated on a pile of masonry matching shakels.

"What's this?" yelled Boroo. "Don't you know we're three days behind in the work as it is? You're fired, both of you! Here, take your pay and go!"

And he gave them each a week's wages and kicked them off the masonry and the premises. Then he hunted up Maxim Gork, the foreman, to give him a piece of his mind. "But," said Gork, "these men were only looking for a job."

"Gurk!" cried Boroo (see Lillian Tish's "Explosives of the Ancients") and kicked himself violently in the shin.

INCREASE IN THE PRICE OF PAPER IN CHINESE STATES.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Peking, April 17.—Because of the increase in the price of paper, the Central Government, through the ministry of agriculture and commerce, has instructed the paper mill at Hankow to increase its output. Small newspapers throughout China are being closed down because of the high price of paper, and even dailies in the larger cities have been compelled to cease publication.

MOMENTOES OF FALLEN MEN PACKED AWAY IN OFFICES.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
London, April 17.—Packed away in the pigeon holes of the record office of the Territorial regiments in London buildings are thousands of little brown parcels and canvas bags which have a pathetic interest for the relatives of soldiers who have died in action. There are letters, too, many hundreds of them—the last line, perhaps, to parents, relatives or friends—written just before the battle. Grim relics of the fight, the canvas bags contain all that the soldier left in the way of effects. A wrist watch, a shaving brush, a pipe or a photograph—these are but a few of the mementoes.

SYNOPSIS.

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from imminent danger on a scenic railroad by George Storm, a newsboy. Grown to young womanhood, Helen saves Storm, now a fireman, and Robert Seagrave, promoter, from a threatened collision. Safe-keepers employed by Seagrave steal the line for the Tidewater, finally wound the general and his daughter. Helen goes badly involved by his death. Helen goes to work on the Tidewater. Helen recovers the survey plane from Seagrave, and though they are taken from her, finds an accidentally made proof of the survey. Storm is employed by Rhinelander. Splice, Seagrave's son, steals records to protect Rhinelander, and Storm and Helen save Splice from death in the burning courthouse. Helen in Superstition mine pinches out. Seagrave salts it and sells it to Rhinelander. The vein is relocated.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

A FIGHT FOR A FORTUNE

A bright morning sun beat down in winter warmth on the Superstition mine. Near the mouth of the tunnel stood Amos Rhinelander, now sole owner of the property, giving orders to his foreman. At the loading platform not far away George Storm was bantering with Helen Holmes. It was the day after her hazardous fight down the aerial railway, but she looked as refreshed and charming as if she had never known the meaning of the word trouble.

George Storm, her companion, stalwart and young, was disputing with Helen for the possession of a pocket mirror he had fished from her vanity bag, when Rhinelander approached. "I am afraid I am de trop here," he said dryly, looking from one to the other.

Helen flushed the least bit. "Why not at all," she disclaimed. "We were only waiting for the team to come back from Valley."

"And you found it easier to wait together," continued Rhinelander, unabashed. "However," he went on, sparing the manifest embarrassment of the young couple, "I've something to say to each of you."

They looked at him questioningly. He held two papers in his hand. "Helen," he continued, "yesterday completed, I think, pretty thoroughly, my title to the Superstition mine. I never expect to get any stronger claim on a piece of property than I now have on this. 'Unless,' he added, quizzically, "to my lot in the home cemetery after I occupy it permanently. In fact," his face lighted with a smile, "it looked awhile yesterday as if I shouldn't have any real use for that even. I certainly thought, George," he said, speaking to Storm, "while we were trapped in the tunnel, the Superstition mine itself would be our last resting place. But while we were relocating that big vein you, Helen, were getting without the loss of a minute the help necessary to bring us out alive."

"That is one reason," he went on, deliberately, "why I have decided over night to convey to you, little girl, with my compliments and best wishes, a certificate for one-third, the capital stock of this property." He handed her a paper. "Here it is."

"George," he turned to his assistant, "you, too, have stood by me at every turn of the road since I went into this cut-off fight. You lost your job with the Tidewater line through sticking to me. I could have got you reinstated—you know that, of course, as well as I do. But there was a little selfishness, I admit, in my not doing so. I felt you could be of more aid to me on the front; and my expectations have not in a single instance been disappointed."

"I don't expect to spend all my life in this country. I shall have to leave behind me, when I go East, someone to represent my interests and to guard them. The great wealth that has come to me in this property has come over night. I wasn't suffering for money before I owned it. But I want the man who stands out in this country, for the interests of Amos Rhinelander to have a substantial monetary backing outside his care of my affairs. This is why, George, I am presenting to you in this certificate, a second one-third of the capital stock of the Superstition mine. Now," he exclaimed, putting up his hands to shut off the protests and expressions of gratitude voiced by his companions together, "I don't want to hear a word further about this from either of you. All Helen and I ask from you," he was speaking to Storm—"is to see that our dividend checks are mailed to us promptly."

A man came up to Rhinelander with a letter. He opened the note and read:

Dear Mr. Rhinelander: Please tell Helen Holmes that Leary, known likewise as Lefty (but whose real name was Hyde), has confessed he killed her father.

The warden says that maybe I will be paroled about the 16th. SPIKE. Rhinelander read the note aloud very slowly and distinctly. For a moment the three were silent. Rhinelander handed the letter to Helen. She stood deeply moved.

In Agreement. "Do you think your constituents agree with your views?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "I made it a point to have my views in agreement with theirs before I said a word."—Washington Star.

Bells.

Bells have been employed in association with religious worship since the early days of Egypt. Cymbals and hand bells and small crotals served for the festival of Isis. Aaron and other Jewish highpriests wore bells of gold upon their raiment. In camp and garison the Greeks employed bells. The Romans announced the hour of bathing by their melody. Copper and tin, the old composition, is still regarded as the best bell metal. Steel has been tried, but does not make a successful bell. Glass bells are mellow and beautiful in tone, but the material is too fragile. The one metal which is impossible is that which everybody imagines makes the best bell—silver.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

Joyous news! Alice Joyce has emerged from the chrysalis of obscurity in which she has concealed her bright picture play self from the public for the last year or so, and is looking around with the idea of again appearing on the screen. Needless to say, a number of companies are eagerly flagging her. Which one she joins is a matter of conjecture, but we have a pretty fair idea. Would you reckon? You remember Miss Joyce has been a favorite and the wife of the popular screen star, Thomas Moore. Now she has added to her list of titles that of mother of a small daughter, Joyce Moore, who, according to the best information, was the real cause of the mother's absence from the motion picture play theaters.

PICTURES TO TELL OF INDIANA'S FAME

The state of Indiana is to be the first among the United States to perpetuate her historic and artistic fame through the medium of motion pictures. Robert Lieber of Indianapolis, representing a number of Indiana's public men and acting with the approval and support of the Indiana state historic commission, has signed a contract for the filming of a spectacular production in seven reels, which will picture and preserve the history of the Hoosier state from LaSalle's time to the present day. The cost of the completed production may reach $100,000.

Production of "Historic Indiana" will start immediately. Gilson Willets, the noted writer, who pictured "The Adventures of Kathlyn," "The House of a Thousand Candles," etc., has been engaged by the Indiana governor to prepare the scenario. The Illinois state historic commission, James Whitcomb Riley to prepare the subtitles in verse.

For the sum of "two and a half dimes" Billie Reeves bought a ring that tells him when to carry a sunshade instead of a water-proof. One day Billie bought a ring from a Turkish peddler and soon after he discovered that it turned green when it was going to rain, and sure enough it rained.

George Periolat, whose collection of far eastern curios has excited the admiration of all art lovers who have seen them, has one of the finest and largest collections of jade on the Pacific coast.

SCENE FROM "DESTINY" OR "THE SOUL OF A WOMAN"

This remarkable photoplay, which has its return showing at the Majestic Theatre tonight only, is a masterpiece of pictured allegory from the original document by Anthony P. Kelly, and it carries a sublime message to all people.

"The Soul of a Woman"—the story of Mary Cadman, her supreme sacrifice, her bitter tribulation and renunciation, and the glorification of her final passing, is a picture that arouses the deepest emotions of the human heart. A Metro Wonder-play in five acts.

AT THE APOLLO.

John Barrymore in "Nearly a King."

There are many ways of meeting a girl for the first time. One of them is to slide into her stateroom in the middle of the night, while arrayed in pajamas, seated securely, if not very comfortably, on your steamer trunk. There are only a very few young men who have attempted this extremely unconventional form of introduction, among them John Barrymore, who thus waits his way into the friendship of Helene, the Princess of Okam, in the famous Players Film company's presentation of "Nearly a King," in which the celebrated comedian is starred on the Paramount program at the Apollo tonight.

Having thus been thrust into the presence of the lady by a terrific storm at sea, Barrymore attempts to cover his embarrassment and his pajamas by seizing a quilt. But, unfortunately, it is the same quilt with which Helene is attempting to cover her own embarrassment. This is not the only heart-rending predicament in which Jack finds himself in connection with the delightful Helene. After they have become very deeply interested in each other, Jack is robbed in London and finds himself penniless. Rather than starve, he takes a job as a caddy. While munching his first meal—pigs' feet—he finds himself face to face with Helene, who believes him to be wealthy. He cannot escape and is forced to drive her about London, in mortal terror of her discovering his identity. After many a near-fatal fight, Jack finally gets rid of his fare without betraying his laughable experiences.

AT THE APOLLO.

Dustin Farnum Tuesday.

True to the life of the Kentucky mountaineer in those days when his path was beset with the dangers that the heart-rending family feuds, comes "The Call of the Cumberlands," a Pallas picture photoplay, to be seen at the Apollo theatre Tuesday.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Heart and Home PROBLEMS

—By—
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to
MRS. THOMPSON
in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two working girls and would like to have you advise us in regard to the following questions:

(1) Why is it not proper for a young man to kiss a girl good night?
(2) Is it proper to go riding with any one you happen to meet down town?
(3) After going to a show in the evening and returning home, should you invite your friend in?
(4) If so, how long should he be permitted to stay?
(5) I was out with a fellow the other night and upon returning home, as it was early I asked him to come in. He did so, but stayed only a few minutes. I have not heard from him since. Do you think I should act this way, or do you think he was probably disappointed in me as I had not known each other long?
(6) Should you accept expensive gifts from a friend you have known several years?
(7) Is it all right to dance with a fellow at a club, proper to whom you have not been introduced?
(8) Upon entering a hotel or cafe, should your friend find a table, or should you?

Also, should your friend find a table, or should you?

ANXIOUS GIRLS.
When a girl goes to a dance, she should be able to tell what girls will be there. She should be able to tell herself to be kissed, and they should be able to tell because there is a tendency to be familiar.

(1) No. You should not invite a boy to dance in it if it is after ten-thirty.
(2) You may hear from him yet, but he was probably disappointed in you. You can't expect to please every one.
(3) No. A girl should not accept expensive gifts unless she is engaged to the man who gives them.
(4) It is not proper. At a club dance a young man could certainly find some one to introduce him.

(7) The head waiter usually leads you to a table, but if you don't like its location you are at liberty to choose another. The man does the ordering.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What is the correct pronunciation for "Villa"?

(3) How many boys must a mother have to get a pension from the government?
(4) What is the highest mother's pension paid in Illinois?
(5) Does a mother get the pension if she separated from her husband or only if he is dead?

INQUISITIVE
(1) Vee-ya.
(2) Ask the police to help you find out.
(3) Allowances are granted to widowed mothers with one or more children under the age of sixteen. At the present time twenty-eight states have either general or limited laws commonly known as "widowed mothers' pension laws," as follows: Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

(4) Illinois pays $15 a month for one child and $10 for each additional child under sixteen, however, $30 for any one family.
(5) Some of the states give pensions to mothers separated from their husbands. You can find information on pages 512 and 513 in "The World Almanac and Encyclopedia, 1916."

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Where does a boy live when he takes three girls to the show?
(2) At what place should I ask to get information about a movie actor?
(3) BLUE EYES.
(1) The proper place would be next to the aisle, but if he wanted to there is no reason why he should not sit between two of the girls.

Household Hints

Milk and Water Bread made in one hour (measurements with standard measuring cup and spoonfuls level).—One cup scalded milk, one cup boiling water, one tablespoon lard, one tablespoon butter (all lard may be used), one and one-half teaspoons salt, one compressed yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth cup lukewarm water. Put butter, lard, sugar and salt in a large bowl, pour over boiling water and scalded milk. When lukewarm add dissolved yeast cake. Add flour until batter is of consistency of muffin batter. Beat thoroughly with a spoon, then add more flour, mix, and turn on well-floured board, leaving a clean ball. Knead until mixture is smooth and elastic to the touch and bubbles may be seen under the surface. Return to the bowl and let rise until dough has doubled its bulk, or about one and one-half hours. Toss on board slightly floured, knead, shape into loaves, cover, let rise until dough has doubled its bulk. Bake in hot oven forty-five minutes. Makes eight medium loaves. Recipe may be doubled or tripled to suit different sized families.

Date Bread.—Two cups stoned and chopped dates, four cups flour, two cups milk, four teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one egg and half cup sugar. Sift ingredients into a basin, and egg well beaten, dates and milk, and mix well together. Allow to stand for twenty-five or thirty minutes, and bake in moderate oven forty-five minutes. This bread makes delicious sandwiches.

Morning Buns.—When molding bread dough into loaves in the morning, reserve a lump as large as a tuncup. Take a scant half cup of sugar, one spoon of salt, two large tablespoons lard and two cups lukewarm water; drop dough in this and set aside to rise about five minutes. In the afternoon mix stiff into loaf, raise until even, bake in hot oven, and dry place. This makes about two and one-half dozen, and they are very nice.

TO CAN RHUBARB.
Take nice fresh rhubarb, wash and cut up (without peeling) in lengths; pack in fruit jars that have been sterilized in boiling water. Stand five minutes, pour off all water, put on new rubber, refill and seal. Stand three days; look at cans occasionally; if at end of three days the liquid remains clear, wrap cans in paper and place in dry place. The fruit will come from the can in perfect condition.

CANDIES.
Velvety Molasses Candy.—Put in a small kettle one and one-half pounds sugar, one-half pint molasses, one-half pint water, one-fourth cup vinegar. Heat: when boiling add one-half teaspoon cream tartar, boil till it clings in cold water; stir with almost done, add one-fourth pound butter, one-fourth teaspoon soda. Cool in buttered pan and pull.

SPINACH NESTS WITH HARD-BOILED EGGS.—Spinach, small pieces, salt and pepper to taste, eggs hard-boiled. Wash spinach carefully, getting it free from all dirt; put it into the pot with a small piece of butter and cook about twenty minutes. Season with salt and pepper. Form is the shape of nests and in each one place a hard-boiled egg.
Oyster Omelet.—One pint oysters, three eggs, three tablespoons milk (sweet), one teaspoon baking powder, pinch salt, flour to make thin batter. Mix whites and yolks separately. Grease skillet with lard (as for pancakes), put half of batter in skillet; after it commences to cook, put half of oysters in. Let these cook a few minutes, then add the rest of oysters and balance of batter. Cook for a few minutes. Then beat whites of eggs, put on top of omelet and turn over in skillet. Then serve.

Scalloped Beans With Tomatoes.—Cook navy beans until almost done, then take out and put in baking dish (have the beans dry); add one pint canned tomatoes and one pint mashed potatoes mixed thoroughly. Season with salt, pepper and butter. Place in oven and bake to a golden brown. Delicious.

In the Bill.
Bacon—Somebody said there was something stunning about your wife's new dress. I don't see it. Egbert—Or course you don't. You don't suppose she'd leave the price mark on it, do you?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

GOOD CARRIAGE.

"How well dressed that girl looks," I thought to myself the other day as I watched one of the clerks in a department store while I waited for my change.

Or perhaps I should say I felt it in the sub-conscious, unanalytical way in which we first register such impressions. Afterwards I analyzed my impression, and what do you suppose I found the well-dressed girl had on? A black silk coat, a simple white blouse, a plain tailored black skirt and trim black accessories—a very simple costume.

Her Good Carriage Made Her Seem Smartly Dressed.

When I asked myself that question and the answer was that she carried herself so well, with such a buoyant, graceful erectness, that she gave the effect of style and smartness to that very simple costume.

Just as one is deceived by the stinging figure, charming face and graceful attitude of the pretty lady in the fashion plates into thinking one admires the gown she has on, so I had been deceived by her unusual carriage of carriage into thinking it was this girl's dress that I admired.

What a big difference carriage does make in the appearance of both men and women!

We were comparing the appearance of two men the other day and some one said: "Of course John has the great advantage of being the taller."

When Every body has heard him say so, and I know John isn't, because I remember how disappointed he was when he stopped growing without reaching the six-foot mark. He never could get above five feet ten and three-quarters.

The rest of us were incredulous, but she subsequently proved she was right. And yet John had seemed to all of us the taller because he carried five feet ten and three-quarters. Whereas Ralph had a loose-knit, slovenly carriage.

A slouch is first cousin to a deformity. It spoils the effect of the handsomest face, the best-built figure, the most expensive clothes.

How She Spoiled a New Gown.
At a function the other night a friend of mine appeared in a smart new gown. "Didn't she look pretty?" I said to the cynic.

"Yes, at first," he said; "but toward the end of the evening she slumped down in her chair so that the dress looked as if it came out of a rag bag."

A business man who hires the salesmen for his firm once told me that a good carriage carried more weight with him than a good-looking man. The foundations of a good carriage are laid in youth; it is easy then to acquire the habit of standing gracefully erect (chest out and stomach in) early in the contrary; and the mother will win their ultimate gratitude even though they may be impatient at the time. Good looks and good clothes are advantages which we cannot all give our children, but a good carriage we can give—if they will only help us.

Harry's Wife

"I think the Lord meant every family to live alone or else he would not have made so many disagreeable people in this world," Mrs. Folsom sipped her tea and looked over the tea table to her friend.

"By which you mean?" Mrs. Ames smiled encouragingly.

"Harry and his bride are looking at summer cottages," Mrs. Folsom's tone was full of mystery and the speech was accompanied by a knowing look.

"And I shall even to it that they do not return to our house in the fall," she said about the time Mrs. Ames leaned forward with eager anticipation. She could detect a story behind the mysterious expression of her friend.

"Did I ever tell you that when Harry divulged his daring plan of marriage and following his bride upon us, I definitely advised against it?" began Mrs. Folsom.

"No. That is not like you to take up arms against the inevitable," Mrs. Ames shook her plump sides in silent laughter.

"I cannot imagine you lifting your voice against any project dear to Harry's heart," continued Mrs. Ames as her friend looked inquiringly at her.

"I had only seen Bertha once, but I knew what the end would be. I had to protest. There was a note of quiet sadness in the voice."

"Harry of course understood that it was merely a matter of form; that in the event of his insisting he could depend on you as an ally. A smile was Mrs. Ames' only answer."

"Harry with all the impulsiveness of youth insisted on being married. The fact that his father had taken him into partnership meant, he was persuaded, an income at once, even if his father had stipulated that he should receive the fees from his own patients. The partnership gave Harry all he could make the first year with no expense whatever. He was sure all the extra courses he took would make him a success. There was a sadness in the smile as she added, 'What a thing it is to be young.'"

"Couldn't the girl see any breakers ahead in such a course?" asked Mrs. Ames.

"Bertha feels able to cope with any situation that could arise," remarked Mrs. Folsom with a tinge of sarcasm. "Just what type is she? I have never seen her, you know." Mrs. Ames helped herself to another water.

"No, nothing so cross as that. I simply could not quarrel with Harry's wife, but some day I'll tell you how I've been in this changed atmosphere. It is time for Jasper to be at home soon, so I must go and try to arbitrate all differences," laughed Mrs. Folsom, rising.

HENRY MORGANTHAU, JR., WILL WED MISS ELINOR FATMAN.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
New York, April 17.—Henry Morgenthau, Jr., came back to the United States from Turkey with his father, Ambassador Henry Morgenthau, expressly to wed Miss Elinor Fatman, the girl who has been his sweetheart ever since he was old enough to have one.

The wedding ceremony was performed in the presence of Ambassador and Mrs. Morgenthau, Mr. and Mrs. Fatman and other near relatives of both families, today at the Fatman home here.

Miss Fatman has long been known in New York society circles for her share in amateur theatricals. Miss Fatman bears a striking resemblance to the Emperor Napoleon and has interpreted the character of that monarch for the edification of her friends, more than once.

Miss Fatman's father is a New York millionaire, chairman of the Raritan Woolen mills and the Somerset Manufacturing company of New York.

Young Morgenthau was appointed a special representative of the Department of State to assist his father as Ambassador to Turkey and was with the Ambassador at Constantinople throughout Mr. Morgenthau's stay there.

You may use an old favorite recipe and the best of materials and make it carefully, the oven may be just right, yet you will have a failure if "The Power behind the Dough" is not the right one to leaven it properly and make it light, digestible, wholesome.

Good baking without good baking powder is out of the question. K C Baking Powder has wonderful leavening power, and the double action—in the bowl and in the oven—makes good results doubly certain.

Take no chances of failure—use K C and have "good luck" every time. At all Grocers.

HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Letters may be addressed to Wm. A. BRADY, M. D., in care of the Gazette.

TOO MUCH STUDY

Although "overwork" and "excessive study" are seized upon as convenient explanations for a life of dis-eases, which are in reality due to many causes, it is impossible to escape the fact that many young people in high schools and colleges lay the foundation for a lifetime of ill health in too much study. Competent pedagogues recognize this fact when they insist among the essential requirements for graduation or graduation such athletic accomplishments as swimming or fencing.

It is a sad and rather frightful thing to see young high school girls dragging home at night after a night of great exertion, instead of a night of dancing, visiting or some healthful recreation. Rather an ordinary, but well-balanced young woman than a prodigy of learning with a poorly developed body and "nerves" or delicate health.

At the risk of bringing down upon us the ire of schoolmasters, we say that a normal boy or girl should be able to get along satisfactorily in high school without night work—that if the five hours spent at school each day will not suffice for all necessary work something is wrong with the system of instruction.

Five hours per day is ample for actual brain work, at least for young people. If more than that is attempted health is endangered. If more than five hours were required for the normal, the average, our schools would have longer sessions.

The evening should be the student's own. No to be spent in dance halls, or anywhere except at home, or at the home of responsible people, or at least under the supervision of reliable adults.

Eye-strain, spinal curvature, neurasthenia, anemia, tuberculosis, and sometimes actual mental aberration may be brought on or favored by too much study.

Better a healthy "bonehead" than a sickly marvel.
Somewhat, in real life, the "head of his class" rarely shines conspicuously. In fact, it is rather a misfortune for a boy or girl to graduate with honors.

No night study. Let the young brains have a chance to work. Don't allow ambitious teachers to convert your home into a school annex.

Removing the Cause of Much Sickness

The advantage in taking Foley Cathartic Tablets is that in addition to carrying off the entire congested mass without griping or nausea, they thoroughly cleanse the walls of the intestines and keep them free of all clogging matter.

It is this clogging on the walls of the intestines that prevents their natural action and function, and is the direct cause of so much of the sickness and misery that makes constipation the current of our present day. For it is constipation that is responsible for a large share of headaches, depressed feelings, and many other serious bodily ills.

W. A. McRae, an elderly gentleman living at Raleigh, Ga., writes: "Foley Cathartic Tablets are the only ones I have ever taken that cleanse my system thoroughly and do not grip or hurt me at all. They are entirely satisfactory and wonderfully different and more pleasant than anything I have ever used."

W. T. SHERER.

WHY SPRING COLDS ARE DANGEROUS

If neglected they lead to serious, perhaps fatal results.

If you get cold at this time of year and try to "let it wear off" it frequently develops into a stubborn throat trouble, which may in turn become chronic asthma, bronchitis or worse. It is important to remember that Father John's Medicine relieves colds because of its nourishing, body-building elements, which give strength to the system and enable each organ to resume its normal functions. Father John's Medicine is not a patent medicine, contains no injurious drugs, but is a pure food medicine, for those who are weak and run-down.

If you have any difficulty in securing Father John's Medicine from your druggist, write to Father John's Medicine, Lowell, Mass., enclosing $1.00 for a large bottle by express prepaid.

CHAPTER VII

A Tum in the Trail

For Brouillard it had seemed the most natural thing in the world to fall under the spell of enchantment. He knew next to nothing of the young woman's life story; he had not cared to know. It had not occurred to him to wonder how the daughter of a man who drilled and shot the holes in his own mine should have the gifts and belongings—when she chose to display them—of a woman of a much wider world. It was enough for him that she was piquantly attractive in any character and that he found her marvelously stimulating and uplifting. On the days when the devil of moroseness and irritability possessed and maddened him he could climb to the cabin on high Chigiringo and find sanity. It was a keen joy to be with her, and up to the present this had sufficed.

"Egoism is merely another name for the expression of a vital need," he said after the divagating pause, defining the word more for his own satisfaction than in self-defense.

"You may put it in that way if you please," she returned gravely. "What is your need?"

He stated it concisely. "Money—a lot of it."

"How singular!" she laughed. She got out of the hammock and came to lean, with her hands behind her, against the opposite porch post. "But tell me, what would you do with your pot of rainbow gold—if you should find it?"

Brouillard rose and straightened himself with his arms over his head like an athlete testing his muscles for the record-breaking event.

"What would I do? A number of things. But first of all, I think, I'd buy the privilege of telling some woman that I love her."

She was silent for so long a time that he looked at his watch and thought of going. But at the deciding instant she held him with a low-spoken question.

"But Tell Me, What Would You Do With Your Pot of Rainbow Gold?"

"Does it date back to the handicap? You needn't tell me if you don't want to."

"It does. And there is no reason why I shouldn't tell you the simple fact. When my father died he left me a debt—a debt of honor; and it must be paid. Until it is paid—but I am sure you understand."

"Quite fully," she responded quickly, and now there was no trace of levity in the sweetly serious tone. "Is it much?—so much that you can't?"

He nodded and sat down again on the porch step. "Yes, it is big enough to go in a class by itself—in round numbers, a hundred thousand dollars."

"Horror!" she gasped. "And you are carrying that millstone? Must you carry it?"

"If you knew the circumstances you would be the first to say that I must carry it, and go on carrying it to the end of the chapter."

"But—but you'll never be free!" "Not on a government salary," he admitted. "As a matter of fact, it takes more than half of the salary to pay the premiums on—pahaw! Let's drop it."

She was looking beyond him and her voice was quick with womanly sympathy when she said: "If you could drop it—but you can't. And it changes everything for you, distorts everything, colors your entire life. It's heart-breaking!"

"This was dangerous ground for him and he knew it. In the arid of young manhood he had taken up the vicarious burden dutifully, and at that time his renunciation of the things that other men strove for seemed the lightest of his fetters. But now love for a woman was threatening to make the renunciation too grievous to be borne."

"How did you know?" he queried curiously. "It does change things. I'd sell anything I've got, save one, for a chance at the freedom that other men have—and don't value."

"What is the one thing you wouldn't sell?" she questioned, and Brouillard chose to discover a gently quickened interest in the clear-seeing eyes.

"My love for the—for some woman. I'm saying that, you know. It is the only capital I'll have when the big debt is paid."

"Do you want me to be frivolous or serious?" she asked, looking down at him with the grimacing little smile that always reminded him of a caress. "I have been wondering whether she is or isn't worth the effort—and the reservation you make. Because it is all in that, you know. You can do and be what you want to do and be if you only want to hard enough."

He was looking down, chiefly because he dared not look up, when he answered soberly: "She is worth it many times over; her price is above rubies. Money, much or little, wouldn't buy it."

"That is better—much better. Now we may go on to the ways and means; they are all in the man, not in the things, not none whatsoever," as Tig would say. Let me show you what I mean. Three times within my recollection my father has been worth considerably more than you owe, and three times he has—well, it's gone. And now he is going to make good again when the railroad comes."

Brouillard got up, thrust his hands into the pockets of his working coat, and faced about as if he had suddenly remembered that he was wasting the government's time.

"I must be going back down the hill," he said. And then, without warning: "What if I should tell you that the railroad is not coming to the Ni-quola, Amy?"

To his utter amazement the blue eyes filled suddenly. But the owner of the eyes was winking the tears away and laughing before he could could put the amazement into words.

"You shouldn't hit out like that when one isn't looking; it's wicked," she protested. "Besides, the railroad is coming; it's got to come."

"It is still undecided," he told her mechanically. "Mr. Ford is coming over with the engineers to have a conference on the ground—with the Cortwright people. I am expecting him any day."

"And the government?" "The department is holding entirely aloof, as it should. Everyone in the reclamation service knows that no good can possibly come of any effort to force the region ahead of its normal and natural development. And, besides, none of us here in the valley want to help blow the Cortwright bubble any higher than it has to be."

"Then you will advise against the building of the extension?" Instead of answering her question he asked one of his own.

"What does it mean to you—to you, personally, apart from the money your father might make out of it, Amy?"

She hesitated a moment and then met the shrewd scrutiny of his gaze with open candor.

"The money is only a means to an end—as yours will be. You know very well what I meant when I told you that three times we have been obliged to come back to the mountains—to try again. I dreaded the coming of your camp; I dread a thousand times more the other changes that are coming—the temptations that a mushroom city will offer. This time father has promised me that when he can make his stake he will go back to Kentucky and settle down; and he will keep his promise. More than that, Steve has promised me that he will go, too, if he can have a stock-farm and raise fine horses—his one healthy ambition. Now you know it all."

He reached up from the lower step where he was standing and took her hand.

"Yes; and I know more than that. I know that you are a mighty brave little girl and that your load is heavier than mine—worlds heavier. But you're going to win out; if not today or tomorrow, why, then, the day after. It's written in the book."

She returned his hand-grip of encouragement impulsively and smiled down upon him through quick-springing tears.

"You'll win out, too, Victor, because it's in you to do it. I'm sure of it—I know it. There is only one thing that scares me."

"Name it," he said. "I'm taking everything that comes today—from you."

"You are a strong man; you have a reserve of strength that is greater than most men's full gift; you can cut and slash your way to the thing you really want and nothing can stop you. But—you'll forgive me for being plain, won't you?—there is a little, just the least little bit of desperation in the present point of view, and—"

"Say it," he commanded when she hesitated.

"I hardly know how to say it. There were ideals in the beginning; don't let them fall down in the dust or in the mud. It's got to be clean money, you know; the money that is going to give you the chance to say, 'Come, girl, let's go and get married.' You won't forget that, will you?"

He relinquished the hand of encouragement because he dared not hold it any longer, and turned away to stare absently at the timbered tunnel mouth whence a faint clinking of hammer upon steel issued with monotonous regularity.

"I wish you hadn't said that, Amy—about the ideals."

"I don't know what you mean," she said simply.

"Perhaps it is just as well that you don't. Let's talk about something else—about the railroad. President Ford hasn't decided; he won't decide until he has looked the ground over and had a chance to confer with me."

She bridged all the gaps with swift intuition. "He meant to give you the casting vote? He will build the extension if you advise it? Then it will lie in your hand to make us rich or to keep us poor," she laughed. "Be a good god-in-the-car, please, and your petitioners will ever pray." Then, with an instant return to seriousness: "But you mustn't think of that—of course, you won't—with so many other and greater things to consider."

"On the contrary, I shall think very pointedly of that; pointedly and regrettably—because your brother has made it practically impossible for me to help."

"My brother?" with a little gasp. "Yes. He offered to buy my vote with a block of 'Little Susan' stock. That wouldn't have been so bad if he hadn't talked about it—"

"When Mr. Ford comes you must forget what Steve said and what I have said. Good-by."

An hour later Brouillard was closeted in his log-built office quarters with a big, fair-faced man, whose rough tweeds and unbrushed soft hat proclaimed him fresh from the dusty-dry reaches of the Quesado trail.

"It is your own opinion that I want, Victor," the fair-faced man was saying, "not the government engineer's. Can we make the road pay if we bring it

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle.

Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities. You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 50c and 25c per box. All druggists.

here? That is a question which you can answer better than any other living man. You are here on the ground and you've been here from the first."

"You've had it out with Cortwright," Brouillard asked. And then: "Where is he now—in Chicago?"

"No. He is on his way to the Ni-quola, coming over in his car from El Gato. But never mind J. Wesley. You are the man I came to see."

"I can give you the facts," was the quiet rejoinder.

A smile wrinkled at the corners of the big man's eyes.

"You are dodging the issue, Victor, and you know it," he objected. "What I want is your personal notion. If you were the executive committee of the Pacific Southwestern, would you, or would you not, build the extension? That's the point I'm trying to make."

Brouillard got up and went to the window. When he turned back to the man at the desk he was frowning thoughtfully, and his eyes were the eyes of one who sees only the clearly etched lines of a picture which obscures all outward and visual objects.

"The picture he saw was of a sweet-faced young woman, laughing through her tears and saying: 'Besides, the railroad is coming; it's got to come.'"

"If you put it that way," he said to the man who was waiting, "if you insist on pulling my private opinion out by the roots, you may have it. I'd build the extension."

Plant That Feigns Death. In South America there is a plant, a species of mimosa, which resorts to death feigning, evidently for the purpose of preventing grass eating animals from eating it. In its natural state this plant has a vivid green hue, but directly it is touched by a human finger or by any living animal it collapses into a tangle of apparently dead and withered stems.

Dinner Stories

The judge to whom a Chicago woman had applied for a divorce looked sternly at the applicant and addressed her thus:

"You say you want a divorce because your married life is one long series of fights? You don't look it."

"No, your honor," said the applicant, "but you ought to see my husband."

"Look, mother," said little Bobby, proudly exhibiting a handful of marbles. "I won all these from Willie Smith."

"Why, Bobby," exclaimed his mother, "don't you know it's wicked to play marbles for keeps? Go right over to Willie's house and give him back every one of his marbles."

"Yes, mother," said the boy obediently. "And shall I take that vase you won at Mrs. Smith's whist party and give it back to her?"

"Will you have me for your wife?" said the leap year maiden, sweetly. "Since you have suggested it, I will," he replied. "But just remember, Mame, if I don't turn out to be all you expect, you have only yourself to blame."

A somewhat impetuous young fellow rashly engaged himself to a charming young thing, who shortly after the excitement had subsided began to evince doubts. Said she: "How long, dearie, do you think we shall have to be engaged?"

"Well, sweetheart," said the young man cheerily, "I have enough money to last for six months, I think."

How to Make

Want Ads Pay

Example No. 25

Here is the Way Want Ads Will Help You Climb

Want Ads really teach you how to do things. But Want Ads are like any other school. If a scholar remained in the third grade just because he knew he could succeed in it, he would never graduate.

Once you prove to your own satisfaction that you can make Want Ads bring business, or get you a position, that fact alone should suggest to you that Want Ads can sell other goods for you, or get you a better position.

Here are several Want Ads that show you how one young woman kept bettering herself through the Want Ad columns:

FIRST WANT AD WANTED—POSITION AS STENOGRAPHER by young woman of good character and good habits, recently graduated from a leading business college. Willing to work hard.

THIRD WANT AD EXPERIENCED STENOGRAPHER, 18 months in one position and 1 year in another, wishes position where more important duties will be added. Best references furnished.

FIFTH WANT AD WANTED—AN ASSISTANT BY Expert Stenographer. Small wages to start with, but plenty of experience assured. Olive references and record.

SIXTH WANT AD POSITION OF PRIVATE SECRETARY wanted by Young Woman of 8 years' experience, now owner of her own expert reporting business. References of highest class.

This young woman won—got what she went after, as a "green" business college graduate, as an experienced stenographer, as an expert, as an employer, and as a private secretary.

You can do the same.

ISSUES WARNING TO CONSERVATIVE G. O. P'S

OLD POLITICS SAYS BEWARE THE WHIRLPOOL AND RAPIDS.

SEES DANGER AHEAD

Straight and Narrow Path is Only One To Travel If Success is to be Obtained in the End.

N. B.—This is one of a series of articles on Wisconsin Politics written exclusively for the Gazette.

By Old Politics.

Beware the Whirlpool! Also watch out for the rapids below. This is my word of warning to the conservative republicans who may be blinded by the partial success of the recent primaries and believe that the time has come for the repudiation of the ultra progressive ideals of the state as personified by the senior United States senator and his faction.

The fight has only just begun. The initial skirmish was it true, somewhat to the advantage of the conservatives but it was only due to the fact that Governor Philipp, the conservative leader, has made good as governor and the people have confidence in him and wished to express their desire to run for another term.

Straight and Narrow Path: The straight and narrow path is the only one for ultimate success. They can not stray off in search of the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow or stop to listen to the siren song of some aspiring politician who seeks personal glory. They must keep their eyes on the one final goal and keep traveling. It is not going to be a bed of roses for whoever is chosen as the conservative candidate for senator will be on during the strenuous pre-September primary. Far from it. It will rather be the crown of thorns he will wear with but it is all for one great glorious cause! Redemption of the state from the throes of progressivism and the re-establishment of the government for the people, by the people and of the people.

Time to act! I am glad that the convention of a hundred and ten has been called and that they will meet, act and adjourn, in time to give the candidate they select ample time to prepare for his strenuous summer campaign. Talk that Philipp should be the candidate is all emerging from the feeble minds of the McGovern followers who would like to see him eliminated from the gubernatorial contest. However, they are wasting their time as Philipp understands the will of the people and will be a candidate for the governor's chair again.

Of course there is not any time like the present to attempt to snatch a victory from the enemy, but to do so must be by the concerted action of the republican party and not by any factional differences. The McGovern men can not consistently vote for La Follette—in fact have intimidated them to vote for the conservative named—and the rest of the republicans must not let grass grow under their feet in the days that are to come.

Best Timber Possible. In making their selection the coming republican convention must be certain they select the best timber available for the difficult position of republican standard-bearer. Then they must all serve as individuals to give the candidate so chosen their honest and earnest support. There must be no sore when this convention is over. It must all be harmonious.

Personalities of the candidates should not be taken too seriously into consideration except where they will influence the vote getting activities. The man chosen must be one who will carry the flag to the enemy who is a fighting man and not one who waits for others to do his work for him. It is a man's job and no mistake it.

Delays Are Dangerous. I have felt all along that delays are dangerous in this matter. I think so still. The talk about postponing action until a general state convention can be held is all poppycock. In the first place it would not give the candidate chosen an opportunity to prepare himself properly for the battle, and in the second place it would give the enemy ample time to make all their preliminary plans.

One side is a candidate who is evidently paid by the federal government to play politics, miss rail calls and neglect the business of his office and the other man seeking office and income depends upon his own efforts and who must protect his personal interests before offering himself up for possible slaughter. Do it now and pick the best man possible. Small Comfort. There is small comfort from the election returns for the average republican of the ultra progressive stripe. Wisconsin will send a divided delegation to the Chicago convention, the "favorite son" idea is crushed to smithereens and the real defeat of the conservatives is now known to have been brought about by the combination of the socialists in Milwaukee and the La Follette republicans, which resulted in the election of a socialist mayor and La Follette delegates.

Then, too, where the La Follette delegates were successful in former years La Follette districts where the vote was close it was too painfully close to be pleasant. Also the Wilson vote was altogether too large to please the republicans as it indicates the state will not be republican unless personal differences are settled.

Last Warning! I issue one final warning. Get together, all candidates, gentlemen. Select the best man, the man with the most pep and fight in his make-up. Then endorse him and set behind his candidacy with a firm that will bring about success. Do not delay.

Steer clear of the whirlpool and the rapids. Keep to the straight and narrow path and do not listen to the siren song who sing strange songs but keep your eyes on the one goal. Success.

FORMAL CALL MADE FOR MADISON MEET

Delegates and Alternates Apprised of Coming Republican Endorsement for Senator.

Milwaukee, April 17.—A formal call for the meeting in Madison of the committee of 110 is being mailed by George J. West, chairman of the convention committee, to the delegates and alternates. The committee will meet, says the call, "for the purpose of deliberating and action upon the endorsement of a candidate for the United States senate."

Following is the statement issued by Mr. West:

"To the delegates and alternates to the 110th convention:

"Gentlemen: On Wednesday, April 26, 1916, at 2 o'clock p. m. there will be held at Madison, Wis., a republican convention or conference composed of delegates from each congressional district of this state, for the purpose of deliberating and acting upon the endorsement of a candidate for the United States senate, to be voted for at the general election to be held Nov. 7, 1916.

"This call is in pursuance of a resolution passed by the republican convention held at Madison on Jan. 27, 1916, which convention was directed to be held by the republican state central committee.

"REPUBLICAN STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

"By its Convention Committee,

"GEORGE F. GORDON,

"E. H. LYONS."

La Follette men express considerable apprehension over the probable action of the republican state central committee in naming alternates for the delegates elected to make up the Wisconsin delegation in the republican national convention. It is known that the conservative republicans of the state central committee have not discussed or settled upon any policy with respect to the naming of alternates. The suggestion has been made that the defeated candidate in the election ought to be named as alternates as they represent the second choice of the people. Mr. La Follette's supporters are requesting that a known La Follette man be named as an alternate for each La Follette delegate elected.

State Senator Otto Bosshard, one of the progressive republican candidates for governor, was in Milwaukee recently. He said that he was in Milwaukee on business. Asked about the rumor that he was up from time to time to see the governor, he said that either he or former Governor Francis B. McGovern will withdraw as a republican candidate for governor.

Senator Bosshard said he would be in Madison next week to confer with his supporters relative to the campaign. It has not been decided when he will take the stump, he said.

The program included music by Walters' orchestra, an address by Floyd Waite, secretary of public service of Cleveland, the mayor, H. L. Davis, reading a letter by E. H. Sothern and his wife Julia Marlowe, and the act of planting the trees. The vocal music was furnished by the normal school class under the direction of Mrs. Parsons.

MORRIS MILLER

Dan McKetrick bemoans the fact that none of the welterweights in America seem willing to engage in a little setto with Badoud, the great European welterweight champion, who has just come to this country. Badoud has had sixty fights, winning forty-five of them with knockouts. "That beats Ty Cobb's batting average by a long shot," remarked McKetrick recently. "Badoud is hitting them on the chin for an average of 750. We've tried to get Ted Lewis to fight him, but Jimmy Johnston has evidently heard about this fellow, who is as great at Ketchikan as he is at Cleveland. McKetrick was looking for $18,000 in purse money and he doesn't intend that this great Swiss boy shall ruin the golden harvest. Lewis himself says that he is an American now and that if Badoud wants to fight around here he will have to make a ringside in England, you know, the weight is 147 at 2 o'clock. Badoud won the welterweight titles of Switzerland and Belgium and France. Three months ago he went to England and fought Johnny Baslam, holder of the division. Baslam was a great knockout artist himself, but Badoud finished him out in nine rounds."

If the head of the American league was instrumental in strengthening the Cleveland club by having Boston sell Tris Speaker to the Indians he was doing a good thing for his league. Whenever a weak club of the organization should not be overlooked. President Johnson always is on the lookout for his league's best interests and he deserves great credit for having made the Speaker deal. It is absurd to claim that any of the other clubs should have been given a chance at Speaker. Cleveland, a big city, which has been close to last place for several years, needed help. The Washington club did it a good turn when it accepted a low figure for a player of Gandil's standard, and the Boston club aided to build up the team when it turned over Speaker. A well balanced circuit means increased financial returns for all the clubs, and after all, baseball could not exist unless based on a profitable foundation.

No loss an authority than John J. McGraw is responsible for the prediction that Christy Mathewson is coming back. If McGraw is correct in this, there is no way of figuring the Giants out of the National league race. Here is what McGraw is quoted as having said on the subject: "I have every reason to believe that Matty will do some good pitching this year. He has been going along slowly and has suffered no pain in his left shoulder—the ailment which handicapped him all last season. He will take his time until the weather grows warm. Then he'll get a real try-out, and I think that you'll see him come back in old-time form."

John McGraw has this to say about Benny Kauff, the slugging king of the defunct Feds: "Players like Kauff made baseball the national game. He has the spirit I like. It will carry him far. Benny is no man's fool. He is a smart little fellow and he's in there thinking all the time. He has made himself the most talked of baseball player in the world. Those who think they are kidding him better wake themselves up."

A few years ago Benny Kauff and Taylor Farrell were teammates at Huntington, W. Va. Now both are outlanders with the Giants. Farrell, however, is likely to be in the International league soon.

Mack Wheat, Zach's brother, and member of the Brooklyn catching staff, will be sent to Troy, in the New York State league, under option.

TOMAH'S BUBBLE IS BUSTED BY LAKOTAS

LAKOTAS PLAY A WHIRLWIND GAME SECOND HALF AND WON 47 TO 16.

WHERE'S THAT TITLE?

Run Up Thirty Points Last Period, While Tomah Gets But Two Foul Goals.—Game Ends Seaside Here.

Tomah can go back to their "home town" and tack their world's championship pennant on the city hall, or they can ship it to Madagascar, for all the Lakotas care, as the Lakotas gave the alleged title team an unmerciful trimming Saturday night at the Auditorium by the score of 47 to 16. It would be hard to conceive of any team getting a worse drubbing than did the Tomah five in the last half, when the Lakotas more than smothered them under a landslide of scores. The alleged champions crumpled under the brilliant attack of the Jamesville club, while the Jamesville players never stopped in their attack.

All season long the Tomah club has been ranting about its wonderful team. In fact, it was boasted and published that they could beat anything in the world, and that they were willing to wager a thousand dollars on the result. The wagering must have been limited to either state money, or Villa currency. They beat Co. E. of Fond du Lac two games and got their reputation. How they beat Co. E. is a different story, but at least the sheet gives them credit for winning. The first half the Tomah Cardinals made an impression, a slight one, it is true, but in the second half they looked worse than did the Whiting Owls.

Close the Season. The game is the last on the Lakotas schedule closing the season. The Lakotas have won twenty-one out of twenty-five games played, and two defeats were directly due to the fact that two and three of the regulars were not playing in the games. Red Wing and Rockford were the only teams to take the measure of the Jamesville club when the full team was playing and these teams were beaten in return. The best in Wisconsin, Rockford and the Peoria Tigers in Illinois, the Whiting Owls in Indiana, Oakland of Minnesota, and all these teams have been beaten. The only real discredit to the Lakotas' record is the loss of one game to Muscatine, Iowa, when a second string team lost at Muscatine, and no return game was played.

Outside of a weakness at shooting the Lakotas played a wonderful game Saturday. Certainly, did not Dalton get two long baskets? That feat alone marked the game as a marvel exhibition. In the first half the Lakotas played rather slipshod basketball. They did not pull together, work their plays, signals or "get going" as they should. In the second half, it was a different tale. They worked in unison, guarded like a stone wall, and executed plays that made Tomah look like a novice team. In this period the home team showed better basketball than they have all season.

Tomah played better than was expected during the first half. They kept dangerously near the Lakotas during this period and the score was tied for about four minutes. They proved hard fighters, fast, could dribble, but they lacked the finish and polish of being a winning basketball team. They guarded well when they got a hold of the Lakotas, but the trouble was, they could not catch them most of the time. They tried long passes and shots which were erratic in the majority of cases, but half of their scores were made on shots from a distance when the Lakotas were holding back, covering the players as they came down toward the goal. Higgins and Benjamin were their star men, as these two were the only ones to get baskets, and their shooting was restricted to the first half.

Hemming was star. One of the Tomah players squawked before the game as to how he would outclass Hemming if he played against him. Just for that Hemming went into the game and was the star. He outshone any man that Tomah had, three to one. He counted eight times and rarely did he miss. He was in the middle of the team without a stop. Eddie Atwood was off-form for the first half. He should have scored ten or fifteen baskets which he missed and his guard counted four goals. He failed to cover up on the defense and was losing out on the team play. In the second half, however, he switched and played like a whirlwind. He counted five times the last session and his guard never touched the score. Tomah played guard with Dalton, and they had the Tomah forwards well tamed. Edler, playing at forward, scored three goals and was the main cog in the defense. But the marvel of the game was Dalton's baskets, for when "Mossy" stood off twenty feet from the goal, and sliced in two perfect shots, it is time to celebrate and give due honor to the event.

The Lakotas started strong, scoring five points before Tomah counted. Benjamin got away from Atwood and counted two and Higgins dropped in one that put Tomah within one point of the score, as Young counted his first foul shot. Atwood missed half a dozen shots, and the Lakotas were weak at following their tries and getting the ball off the bounding board. The game saw-sawed evenly until the last five minutes when Hemming took a spurt with Edler and the two counted two goal apiece.

The Second Half. That little address by Rev. Brigham and the selection, "Be Strong," by the quartet, must have had an effect on the Lakotas the second half. They came out and got the jump on Tomah and soon had them running in circles. They zipped the ball around like greased lightning, dribbled so fast the visitors could not catch them and in vain did the "world's champions" try to break through the guarding of Edler, Dalton and Young. The Lakotas piled the score up thirty points while Tomah never got a field goal for the game. They got two foul goals this half, making the half score 30 to 2.

Game Summary. Lakota Cardinals—Edler, rf.; Atwood, lf.; Hemming, c.; Dalton, rg., and Young, lg.

Tomah Cardinals—Yaeger, rf.; Higgins, lf.; Ziebel, c.; Benjamin, rg., and Palmer, lg.

Field goals—Hemming, Atwood, 3; Benjamin, 4; Edler, 3; Higgins, 3; Young and Dalton, 2.

Foul goals—Higgins, 2; Young, 1. Fouls called—On Jamesville, 6; on Tomah, 2.

Referee—William Langdon.

Attendance—723.

So Long, Tomah. Possibly McCauley, former manager of the Tomah five, will be more careful how he flourishes that five hundred dollars next season. McCauley was not among those present during the combat Saturday and no one was able to have the satisfaction of "calling" him on the bluff.

Dalton got a long basket and was rewarded by an ovation that sounded like when "Homer" Baker lifts a first one over the fence at the world's series game. Then Dalton tried it again and missed it by five feet. Just to show that he could come back, he dropped in another counter. Will wonders never cease?

Young dropped in one of those neat, long goals and Edler put in one of the longest shots of the game in the second half.

Ziebel twisted his ankle in the second half but after first aid treatment he recovered and continued chasing Hemming around the floor like a shadow, always behind.

The efforts of the pastor and quartet between halves was rewarded by close attention from the crowd, and the address was followed by applause. They say that Rev. Brigham used to be somewhat of a basketball player himself, and with his powerful physique, he ought to have been a "tower" of strength at center.

Now it's baseball, and the games this season have attracted more people than ever before. Good basketball has been played and the city has a just reason for being proud of the team.

Comfortable—that's why they're SENSIBLE

Many other good cigarettes besides Fatimas taste mighty good—WHILE you are smoking them.

But Fatimas deliver something more than good taste. They will give you cigarette comfort—comfort while you are smoking them and comfort AFTER you smoke them.

While you are smoking them, they will feel cool and comfortable to the throat and tongue.

And AFTER you smoke them—even though you may smoke more than usual—they will leave you feeling as you'd like to feel. No heavy or "heady" feeling—none of that "mean" feeling of having smoked too much.

You should try Fatimas.

ALL-AMERICAN FOOTBALL TEAM MEETS TOGETHER AT SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Syracuse, April 17.—For the first time in football history an All-American eleven gathered here today. Members of the mythical 1916 team selected by Walter Camp are guests of the Syracuse University Athletic association.

In the past the men selected for these teams have been pleased to accept the honor bestowed upon them. Because Syracuse was more prominent in the football world last season than ever before, the authorities wish to celebrate in this manner. There are facilities for accommodating 1,000 persons and there is reason to expect every bit of available space will be utilized.

Invitations were sent to the following members of the All-American eleven: Boston, Minnesota; Gilman, King and Mahan, Harvard; Barrett and Shelton, Cornell; Abell, Colgate; Olin, Dartmouth; Peck, Pittsburgh; Olin, Army; and Schlachter of Syracuse.

ILLINOIS SEE A TITLE IN CONFERENCE BASEBALL.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Urbana, Ill., April 17.—Coach Huff and his Illinois baseball squad are home from one of the most successful southern trips the team has ever taken. Although it is said that most of the conference teams will be unusually strong this year, Huff is of the opinion that Illinois will survive another championship. The baseball material is considered the best at his command for several years. He has a good string of pitchers and an all-around heavy hitting aggregation.

The schedule has been announced as follows: All games being at Urbana except where noted. April 11, Wabash college; April 14, Notre Dame; April 15, Notre Dame; April 18, Marshall college; April 21, Indiana at Bloomington; April 22, Purdue at LaPorte; April 25, Ohio State at Columbus; April 29, Wisconsin; May 5, Ohio State; May 6, Northwestern; May 20, Wisconsin at Madison; May 23, Waseda University of Japan; May 27, Chicago.

Brooklyn may discard Hi Myers. Jimmy Johnston, it is said, has shown Manager Robinson so much—so early—that Myers has lost out on an outfield job.

TWO BOSTON CLUBS HOLDING THE LEAD

Fielder Jones Takes Keen Delight in Having St. Louis Beat Sox.—Cubs Fall to Hit Ball.

The rejuvenated teams of the National and American leagues began the 1916 season under favorable weather conditions. Although only three scheduled games were played on Friday, the stars were sufficiently unhampered by the weather to permit the fans throughout the country to get a good idea of the strength or defects of their favorites.

In both leagues, the lineups were sprinkled with names of former stars in the Federal league. Several teams, particularly the St. Louis Americans and the Chicago Nationals, have many federal players on their club rosters. The end of the first week found the Boston clubs leading in each league. Neither has yet lost a game, but the Braves have played only two games and the Red Sox only three. Perhaps the greatest surprise of the short opening week was the strength displayed by Cincinnati in the National and Chicago in the American league. Boston, although outbitten by Brooklyn in the opening series, played flawlessly in the field.

The St. Louis Browns won their first game in Chicago since Oct. 3, 1911. They defeated the Chicago Americans on Sunday, 6 to 5, in a ragged, wild and erratic game. Incidentally, it was the first appearance of Fielder Jones as head of an American league club here since he quit the leadership in 1908 of the club, which was his opponent on Sunday.

Eddie Collins' fumble paved the way for the visitors' first run. Benz' wild-dance with a fumble by Terry, followed by Pratt's hit, which bounded away from Felsa and went for a double, enabled St. Louis to clinch the game in the fifth inning.

The locals started two belated rallies, when the visiting twirlers became astounded, but sensational fielding by Lavan saved the game for them.

Zimmerman Again. Snyder doubled into the crowd in left field, and Hornsby came in with the run that gave St. Louis a 1 to 0 victory over Chicago in the first game of the series at St. Louis on Sunday. Up to the ninth it was a pitchers' battle between McConnell and Meadows, the former having the edge. Sallee, who formed Meadows in the ninth when the latter wavered, also pitched an airtight ball, retiring the side after the bases had been filled. In the tenth Hornsby was safe when Zimmerman's throw wildly to first. Then came Sallee's hit.

TIGERS' CATCHING STAFF GREATLY STRENGTHENED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE] Detroit, April 17.—The catching staff of the Detroit Americans seems greatly strengthened, according to reports from writers with the team during the training trip. Coar Stange, Jennings' first choice backstop, is said to be in great condition this year. His batting and base running were about on a par in 1915—he seldom connected safely and ran bases like a lame elephant. This year Stange took off some weight, has been hitting the ball hard and often and has outdistanced his teammates by "bursts of speed" that are considered remarkable for the big backstop. The addition of Catcher Billy Sullivan, ex-backstop, gives Jennings an able assistant at Stange. Sullivan caught several exhibition games this spring. Although Sullivan's arm is weak, his splendid handling of young pitchers has made him a valuable asset.

ARLIE MUCKS WILL ENTER SHOT PUT AT PENN. MEET.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Madison, Wis., April 17.—Archie Mucks, National A. A. U. and Conference champion, will represent the University of Wisconsin in the shot put at the Penn. relays, April 23. The Badgers have decided to send three teams to the Drake relays April 22.

A wonderfully improved team of the Yankees seems to be the general opinion of the New York baseball sharps. There is no doubt that the strength has been added to the New York team than any other in the American league, and it ought to draw something in the coming campaign. But just how strong the Donovan crew is will be demonstrated after the season gets well under way. There have been other teams which looked good on paper, but which have not come through in the pinch, and the time to pick 'em is after they have made good.

EX-GOVERNOR PECK, ILL FOR HALF YEAR, DIES IN MILWAUKEE

Ex-Mayor of Milwaukee, Author, Publisher and Lecturer, Succumbs at Riverside Sanatorium.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Milwaukee, April 17.—George Wilbur Peck, former governor of Wisconsin, former mayor of Milwaukee, editor, author, lecturer and an American humorist of note, died yesterday, a victim of Bright's disease. He would have been 78 years old on Sept. 26, 1916. Although he had been ill six months, the end came suddenly. He had been confined to his home two months and appeared to be improving until ten days ago, when he was taken to Riverside sanatorium, where members of his family and friends had been calling upon him.

Although born in "York State,"

"Governor" Peck, as he was known in Wisconsin to the hour of his death, came to be one of the most conspicuous Wisconsinans in the nation.

Was Printer's "Devil." Like many public men and writers of the middle west he was the product of a "printing office," as such was known in those days. Some of his best stories and writings were built upon experiences as "printer's devil" and journeyman in his chosen trade.

Through a long career as newspaper publisher, politician, satirist on things as he found them, and as office holder, he so conducted himself that on his retirement several years ago he was considered one of the Badger state's most beloved citizens.

Mr. Peck became nationally known after the publication of his book, "Peck's Bad Boy," and for many years had an army of attentive readers of his Peck's Sun, published in Milwaukee.

As mayor of Milwaukee he was perhaps the most popular man in Wisconsin. While mayor in 1890-91, he was elected governor of Wisconsin on the democratic ticket and served until 1895.

During the world's fair year in Chicago, interests there attempted to lay a pipe line to Waukesha to pipe the famous spring water to the world's fair ground. Waukeshaites were up in arms, believing that such action would drain their springs. They engaged a special train and journeyed to Madison to lay their case before Gov. Peck.

There was a bill in the legislature permitting the Chicago interests to lay the proposed pipe line in Wisconsin and Gov. Peck promptly vetoed this bill and earned the undying gratitude of residents of the Spring City.

Married in Delavan. He was born in Henderson, N. Y., on Sept. 28, 1840. He attended the public schools, which he entered until 1855, although he came to Wisconsin in 1845. He learned the printing trade and was married to Frances Rowley, Delavan, in 1860. He bought a half interest in the Jefferson County Republican in 1860.

Served in Civil War. When the Civil war broke out he enlisted and served two and a half years as private and lieutenant in the Fourth Wisconsin cavalry. In 1866 he started a newspaper called the Representative, at Rhon, and later owned the La Crosse Democrat until 1874. He founded the Sun at La Crosse in 1874. He moved it to Milwaukee in 1875 and then called it Peck's Sun. His slogan, "It Shines for All," is remembered by many.

Mr. Peck was a third-second degree Mason, a member of the Wisconsin consistory, a life member of Wisconsin consistory, a life member of Wisconsin Commandery of the Loyal Legion and a member of B. B. Wolcott Post, G. A. R.

Two Sons Survive. The former governor is survived by two sons, George W. Peck, Jr., Chicago, and Roy W. Peck, a representative for the Erie railroad with headquarters in Chicago, and a sister, Mrs. Anne E. Woodruff, Milwaukee. He was greatly attached to the children of George W. Peck, Jr., David B. Peck, Miss Marjorie Peck, Chicago, and Gerald Peck, Highland Park, Ill.

TEIPER GOES ON TRIAL FOR MURDER OF MOTHER.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Buffalo, N. Y., April 17.—J. Edward Teiper, prominent young business man of Orchard Park, was placed on trial before Justice Brown at the opening of the criminal term of the Supreme Court here today, charged with the murder of his mother, a wealthy widow.

The crime was committed at midnight January 30th, while the mother, Mrs. Agnes M. Teiper, her son Frederick and daughter Grace, were returning to Buffalo in their automobile after a visit to the accused man's home in Orchard Park.

Ed Teiper accompanied the party a few miles down the country road to a point where his own automobile had been stalled and abandoned late that day.

While working on his own machine under the glare of the headlights of the city-bound motor car, Teiper, a negro bandit appeared suddenly and knocked him senseless with a blow on the head. When he recovered consciousness, Teiper swore he found his mother and brother dead, their skulls crushed. Teiper's sister Grace was still alive, although suffering from five separate fractures of the skull.

Miss Teiper has recovered and has been pronounced surgically cured. She is under $15,000 bond to appear as a witness against her brother, but physicians believe she will never be able to recall any of the incidents connected with the tragedy.

Howeley much interest centers on her appearance in court. If her memory should suddenly become clear to the occurrences of the mid-night automobile ride the destiny of her brother probably is in her possession.

The prosecution will make every effort to fasten the crime of matricide upon the accused. It has woven a chain of evidence, mostly circumstantial, around Teiper and expects to prove the murders were planned and executed by him.

District Attorney Dudley claims Teiper was in financial straits; that mortgages and notes held against him totaled over $10,000.

Teiper's mother held $150,000 left by the father to be divided upon her death among the remaining children.

Teiper today appeared cheerful and confident of acquittal. He is 23 years old, a college graduate and a man of intelligence. Up to the time of his arrest he lived with his wife and three small children in a handsome home at Orchard Park.

SHORTAGE ON SULPHUR IN ITALY IS MOST SERIOUS.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Rome, April 17.—A crisis in the sulphur production of the mines of Italy has become a subject of grave concern to the government.

Trouble is partly due to the increase in recent years of the American market, production, partly to a reduction in the output through technical mining difficulties, and partly to the lack of manual labor. The whole of Italy's product averages 12 1/2 million tons, with the mines of Sicily considered the richest.

With the price of sulphur increasing from $11 a ton in 1895 to nearly $20 in 1914, the output in the latter year fell below that in 1895, being but 337,232 long tons, the lowest output in a period of 20 years.

In the same year the United States produced 327,834 tons valued at $5,954,236.
